makers bad become so disheartened at their lesses by the festive "Silly" and others that they would be compelled to "shut up shop" and seek other fields and pastures green. But the bookmakers at the Boundary are still blooming, and the indications are that they have covered their losses.

Betting on horses has become a mania all over the country, and the business in Washington, too, is always brisk during the racture season. Does anyone make money at the pool-rooms? is a question frequently asked. Many persons in the pool-rooms boast of what they have won, but it generally turns out that what they win one day they lose the next.

If everybody won the bookmakers would be routed horse, foot and dragoombut the very fact that the bookmakers continue to exist, shows that there are many tinue to exist, shows that there are many persons who lose, in the long run, large sums of money in the prol-rooms, and that is why the bookmakers still hold the fort and remain unterflied.

East Washington Has a Condory Case

In the Police Court yesterday, Patrick Carr was charged with an assault on two men, named Mrs. Emma Ridgeway and Mrs. Edith Bislet. Both testified that they Mrs. Edith Bislet. Both testified that they are frequenters of Mr. Carr's saloon in East Washington, and that they had accepted drinks from the accused. He was approached by the husband of the former woman and ordered to pay over money for an assault upon his wife.

He reported the fact to Lieutenant Kelly, at the Sixth Precinct Station, and on his advice refused to respond to the demand. It was probably an attempt to extort money, as the testimony of both women convinced the Judge that the complaint was dimey, and he accordingly dismissed the case.
